Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Saturday 27 Mar 2021

UK Outlook for Thursday 1 Apr 2021 to Saturday 10 Apr 2021:
High pressure is expected to build to the west of the UK, introducing colder and largely clearer conditions across the country, along with brisk winds in places. Showers are most likely in northern and eastern parts of the UK. These showers could turn wintry over high ground, especially in the north. Further to the south and west, conditions will be largely dry with variable amounts of sunshine. During and beyond the Easter weekend there is a chance that more unsettled conditions will develop with showers spreading to most areas. Temperatures are likely to be around or below average for the time of the year, and feeling rather cold at times with a potential for widespread overnight frosts.
